SOILS Stony and sandy clay.

One of the wettest years between October and March of the last decade, marked by a mild winter, absence of frost and few incidences of disease in the vineyard. Spring was cool and wet. The high temperatures of early June anticipated a dry and warm summer, before a harvest that lasted for a month from September 12, with somewhat higher yields than in previous years and some occasional interruptions due to rain.

Floral, earthy and vivid fruitiness, its agility, breadth and length stand out, with fresh and fine tannins.

San Román 2016 was bottled in January 2019 after spending 24 months in both new and used 225 and 500 litre French and American oak barrels.
