SOILS Stony and sandy clay.

This year was one of the driest recorded in the last decade, with only a third of rainfall compared to the annual average. The warm character of February and March, together with the general lack of water, brought the cycle forward from bud break, which started ten days earlier than usual. Flowering was quick, with less fruit set, anticipating a harvest with lower yields. After a very windy summer, which favoured the health of the fruit, the harvest started with an unusual earliness, on 25th August, in the vineyards of San Román de Hornija.

Measured maturity and precise fruit on the nose. Silky, with a long finish, creamy and refined tannins. Abounding in pleasure and refinement.

San Roman 2017 was bottled in February 2020 after spending 24 months in new and used 225 and 500 litre French and American oak barrels.
